   The Atlas Lab team shared a presentation of three concepts related to the parklet and satellite parklet project. Comments included:

   1. Plastic materials for wallflower concept is problematic
   2. Basket Stage option has a lot of promise; provides shade, vibes off of basket history which is compelling, allows people to literally go inside a basket, mobile baskets are effective, and have a more viable life-cycle.
   3. Invasive species and basket projects provide a lot of intellectual engagement; could the wallflower concept have an engaging bent, like climate change?
   4. Are wildflowers special to our community? There are a lot of communities that have wildflowers.
   5. Does the basket concept have countywide relevance? Or is it just resonant for certain areas of the county?
   6. What are the cost implications? The basket concept seems like it would be spendy.
   7. Artificial flowers may not last very long in the elements. Do they have to be literal flowers?
   8. Changing and dynamic; is there a way for the installation to provide habitat and/or support environmental function?
   9. Is there a way to hybridize the basket and flower proposals?
